Reforming Government Policy to Preserve Working Landscapes

A Policy-Oriented, Idea-Generating Conference

February 2, 2007

Located at
The University of Georgia’s Atlanta Alumni Center
(3333 Peachtree Street in the Atlanta Financial Center, South Tower, Second Floor)

9:30 am through 5 pm

This conference will bring together university and government scientists, land owners, conservation groups, farm and forestry industry representatives, and federal, local and state policy makers to discuss, analyze, and brainstorm on topics related to the interaction of land use and government policies. Additionally, the conference should provide greater understanding of the primary challenges to sustaining working landscapes, and produce constructive ideas for new or modified state and federal policies that would help to sustain working farms and forests as part of the Georgia landscape in the future. Consensus among attendees on the best ideas and most profitable policy changes to pursue should serve to convince policy makers that those ideas are worth considering. Priorities and consensus ideas that emerge from the conference will be relayed to state legislators for their consideration and study as possible future legislative ideas.
